Summary

I am a Nuclear Security Visiting Scholar at the Center for International Security and Cooperation (CISAC), Stanford University. My fellowship at CISAC is sponsored by the MacArthur Foundation. I am also a Marie Skłodowska-Curie Fellow sponsored by the European Commission.

Previously I was a Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the Universitat Pompeu Fabra (2016-2017) and Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona (2013-2016), Spain. I received my B.S. (2004, with distinction) and M.S. (2007, with distinction) degrees in civil engineering from the University of Rennes 1, France, and my Ph.D. degree in environmental science and technology (2013, summa cum laude) from the Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona, Spain. Before joining academia, I spent four years as an engineer in the design of nuclear energy technologies in Paris, France (2007-2008) and in Boston, MA (2009-2010).

My current research deals with the issue of the long-term management of nuclear waste produced at commercial power plants and the military complex in a context of uncertain transitions and persisting social concerns over nuclear energy technologies. My interdisciplinary research seeks to merge quantitative and qualitative methods for the holistic study of nuclear waste management systems and policies.
